The library of the Alumni Association, the nucleus of which was given by Mr. John Sellers Bancroft, to permit the circulation of art books among the students, has just been enriched by a gift of twenty-four volumes of illustrated "Lives" of the old masters.

The work in salt-glazed stoneware of the pottery class last season is described and illustrated in an article in The Craftsman for September, and the decorative use of mosaic in the cement garden vases, seats, etc., will be reviewed in the same magazine in the October issue. These are two of the simple processes of making common things and materials beautiful which have been employed by the School of late.
